"When I return to New York the Bank of North America will be reconstructed and I will see that all matters are rectified."

Morse then talked of the attachments on behalf of the National Bank of North America and the judgment by default in the suit of R. A. C. Smith.

"The loan from the Bank of North America is amply secured with collatteral," he said. "My counsel, Mr. Boardman, told me before I sailed that the Smith suit over the sale of the bank had been settled.
